Trump is sued for defamation by woman who claims he raped her in 1990s

Trump denies ever meeting E. Jean Carroll.

A woman who accuses Donald Trump of raping her more than 23 years ago in a New York department store sued the U.S. president on Monday over statements he made in June denying that the attack occurred and criticizing her for coming forward.

E. Jean Carroll, a longtime Elle magazine advice columnist, said in a complaint filed in a New York state court in Manhattan that Trump lied about attacking her, and "smeared her integrity, honesty, and dignity" by concocting a "swarm of related lies" to explain why she would make the incident up.

The White House did not immediately respond to a request for comment. White House Press Secretary Stephanie Grisham told the Washington Post that "the lawsuit is frivolous and the story is a fraud – just like the author."

Carroll's account of the alleged rape at Bergdorf Goodman on Fifth Avenue, which she said occurred between the autumn of 1995 and spring of 1996, had been published in New York magazine in June, excerpted from her memoir released the next month.

After the account was published, Trump made statements that he did not rape Carroll and had never met her. He said she was "totally lying" as part of an effort to boost book sales.

"I'll say it with great respect: Number one, she's not my type. Number two, it never happened. It never happened, OK?" he told The Hill newspaper in Washington.

In her complaint, Carroll said the attack lasted two to three minutes, before she ran out of the dressing room and onto Fifth Avenue.

Carroll said in the lawsuit she soon confided in two friends, author Lisa Birnbach and former WCBS news anchor Carol Martin, about the alleged attack, but did not report Trump to authorities because she feared retribution.

She said she went public after accounts in 2017 of alleged sexual misconduct by Hollywood producer Harvey Weinstein, which he has denied, spawned the #MeToo movement.

"No person in this country should be above the law -including the President," Carroll said in a statement provided by her lawyers.

Trump has denied accusations by more than one dozen women who said he made unwanted sexual advances against them years before he entered politics.

He also faces a defamation lawsuit by Summer Zervos, a former contestant on his television show "The Apprentice," who claimed he kissed her against her will in 2007 in New York and later groped her at a Beverly Hills hotel.

Zervos sued after Trump republished on Twitter a post calling her accusations a "hoax." REUTERS

Hidden Banksy mural to be uncovered in Notting Hill

A Banksy mural, covered up by builders' hoarding and scaffolding for the past few months, will be uncovered on Monday in the heart of London's Notting Hill area. The work - known variously as the "Graffiti Painter," "The Painter" or "Velazquez" - shows an artist, thought to be Spanish painter Diego Velazquez, with an easel writing "Banksy" in large red letters. Trump admin. notifies U.N. of Paris climate accord exit

The Trump administration has formally notified the U.N. that it will withdraw the U.S. from the Paris Agreement, the first formal step in a one-year process to exit the global pact to fight climate change, U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo confirmed on Monday. The U.S., the world's largest historic greenhouse gas emitter, would become the only country outside the accord, a decision President Donald Trump promised to boost U.S. oil, gas and coal industries. The State Department letter to United Nations Secretary General Antonio Guterres started the clock on a process that would be completed one day after the 2020 U.S. presidential election, on Nov. 4, 2020. Until its formal exit, the U.S. will continue to participate in negotiations over technical aspects of the agreement. REUTERS

'It's not abuse, it's rape': Spanish sex crime protest

Hundreds of people protested in Spain's capital on Monday against a court ruling last week that cleared five men of gang-raping a 14-year-old girl and instead found them guilty of the lesser charge of sexual abuse. Barcelona's High Court sentenced the five on Thursday to 10 to 12 years in prison, saying the 2016 assault was not rape because the victim, who was drunk and unconscious, could neither "agree to (nor) oppose the sexual relations." A similar ruling in the so-called Wolfpack case sparked mass protests across Spain last year over chauvinism and sexual abuse and it was eventually overturned by the Supreme Court in June. "It's not abuse, it's rape" and "Enough with patriarchal justice" chanted the crowd made up mostly of women gathered in front of the Justice Ministry in Madrid. REUTERS

NYPD Commissioner steps down after 3 years on the job

James O'Neill will be replaced by the NYPD Chief of Detectives.

MORGAN ROUSSEAU
morgan@metro.us

After serving for three years as the city's top cop, New York Police Department Commissioner James O'Neill will step down.

The exact reasons for O'Neill's resignation on Monday were not clear, though the commissioner has dealt with backlash in the wake of controversy over the dismissal of the officer whose chokehold lead to the death of Eric Garner.

At a news conference attended by NYC Mayor Bill de Blasio, O'Neill denied that his departure was related to the Garner controversy, stating, "It wasn't a motivating factor in my decision," but, "I'm not going to stand up here and say it didn't weigh on me heavily."

The Police Benevolent Association, which represents NYPD officers, blasted the commissioner in August for firing Officer Daniel Pantaleo, whose use of a banned chokehold led to Garner's death in 2014. That death was one of a series of killings that sparked nationwide #BlackLivesMatter protests over allegations of police mistreatment of minorities.

Pantaleo filed a lawsuit against the NYPD last month, alleging that he was wrongfully terminated.

O'Neill's resignation also comes amid an epidemic of police suicides, with 10 officers taking their own lives this year. The scourge has prompted new mental health initiatives to address the crisis. In the news conference Monday, O'Neill alluded to the high-pressure nature of his position, stating, "This is a job that consumes you."

But since taking the post, O'Neill has been praised for presiding over the lowest crime rate the city has seen since the NYPD started tracking major crimes. During his tenure, the city has seen the fewest number of homicides recorded since the 1950s. O'Neill has worked in New York City law enforcement since 1983 and was appointed commissioner in 2016. A city spokesperson described O'Neill as the architect of neighborhood policing, overseeing the expansion of Neighborhood Coordination Officers to every precinct, police service area and transit district. Furthermore, he's credited with reforming department policy that drove down crime and simultaneously reduced arrests for low-level offenses.

Current NYPD Chief of Detectives Dermot Shea will replace O'Neill as the next commissioner.

"We cannot take the historic crime reductions in New York City for granted, and Dermot's understanding of the complex issues that lead to crime and disorder, as well as the most effective strategies for addressing these issues, is as good as it gets in policing today," O'Neill said of his replacement.

Chief Shea described his predecessor as "a mentor and a friend," and vowed to build on O'Neill's work on neighborhood and precision policing.

"Every New Yorker deserves to be safe and feel safe, and that has been my mission since I took the oath and became a police officer 28 years ago," Chief Shea said Monday. "As Police Commissioner, this will be what drives me."

Mayor de Blasio Tweeted that Chief Shea will focus on deepening police-community bonds and ending the scourge of gun and gang violence. In another tweet, de Blasio praised the outgoing commissioner, saying, "I'm lucky to have worked with as good a man as Jimmy O'Neill.

McDonald's ousts CEO over consensual relationship with employee

McDonald's Corp dismissed Chief Executive Steve Easterbrook over a recent consensual relationship with an employee, which the board determined violated company policy, the fast-food giant said on Sunday. REUTERS

McDonald's Corp dismissed Chief Executive Steve Easterbrook over a recent consensual relationship with an employee, which the board determined violated company policy, the fast-food giant said on Sunday.

The board found that Easterbrook, 52, who had led McDonald's since 2015, had "demonstrated poor judgment" involving the relationship, McDonald's said in a news release. Easterbrook relinquished his seat on the company's board as well.

"This was a mistake," Easterbrook said of the relationship in an email to employees on Sunday released by the company. "Given the values of the company, I agree with the board that it is time for me to move on."

His departure was among the most significant in corporate America in the past several years over relationships deemed inappropriate.

> "This was a mistake. Given the values of the company, I agree with the board that it is time for me to move on."
> Steve Easterbrook

Scrutiny of executives and their treatment of employees has intensified amid the #MeToo social media movement, which highlighted instances of sexual harassment in the workplace. In June 2018, Intel Corp CEO Brian Krzanich resigned after an investigation found he had a consensual relationship with an employee that breached company policy.

Chris Kempczinski, 51, most recently president of McDonald's USA, was named the company's new CEO, effective immediately. He also joined the McDonald's board.

In his own message to employees, Kempczinski thanked Easterbrook for recruiting him to McDonald's and said he expected the company to continue its customer-focused growth plan. McDonald's Chairman Enrique Hernandez Jr. called Kempczinski "instrumental" in developing the company's strategic plan.

Chicago-based McDonald's, one of the world's most recognizable brands, recently celebrated the 40th anniversary of its Happy Meal for children and is known for its family-friendly reputation.

The company did not provide further details on the circumstances surrounding Easterbrook's departure. McDonald's is expected to disclose financial information related to Easterbrook's dismissal in a securities filing as soon as Monday, the company said.

The company named Joe Erlinger, who has been president of international operated markets, as president of McDonald's USA, succeeding Kempczinski.

"While clearly a loss, McDonald's maintains one of the deepest and longest-tenured management teams, which should help provide some stability through this unexpected transition," Raymond James analyst Brian Vaccaro said in a research note about Easterbrook's exit.

McDonald's shares roughly doubled during Easterbrook's tenure. But the chain in October missed Wall Street profit estimates for the first time in two years as it spent money remodeling U.S. restaurants and speeding up service to address declining customer visits.

Rival fast-food chains in the United States have challenged McDonald's dominance with value meals and new menu items, including plant-based burgers and meat substitutes launched by rivals including Restaurant Brands International Inc's Burger King and Yum Brands Inc's KFC. McDonald's is seen late in reintroducing chicken sandwiches and rival Wendys Co has started serving breakfast.

The remodeling of the company's 14,000 U.S. restaurants includes introducing digital ordering kiosks and mobile ordering. REUTERS

Cold snap grips NYC as forecasters call for late-week snow

New Yorkers are dealing with the largest temperature drop in months.

BECCA GLASSER-BAKER
Rebecca.Glasser@metro.us

ISTOCK

Just as New Yorkers are getting adjusted to "falling back" by an hour, Mother Nature decides to fast-forward straight into winter weather. A drop in temperature in the NYC area could cause the city to see its first snowfall of the season later this week.

According to NBC, New York City is facing its coldest temperatures in seven months. On Monday morning, temperatures dropped to a low of 37 degrees, the lowest in NYC since April 6. Midweek will be fairly mild, with a drizzle and clouds on Tuesday, then sun on Wednesday. Both days will see temperatures in the 50s and 60s. But forecasters are keeping their eyes on Thursday, as the city may see some snowflakes later that night.

According to the National Weather Service, there is a 50 percent chance of snow falling on Thursday night into Friday morning. The wintry mix may transition into rain later Friday.

It just so happens that NYC's November snowfall will be arriving just as the National Weather Service observes its "Winter Awareness Week." According to weather.gov, the National Weather Service and the New York State Office of Emergency Management are promoting winter weather education to keep people safe in their homes, on the road, at work and at play.

> "Unfortunately, many people each year suffer needlessly because they are unaware of the potential dangers of the winter season."
> The National Weather Service

"Unfortunately, many people each year suffer needlessly because they are unaware of the potential dangers of the winter season," the NWS says on its website.

Here's what each day will cover, according to weather.gov: winter weather preparedness on Monday, heavy snow on Tuesday, ice storms on Wednesday, winter floods on Thursday, new simplified winter weather services on Friday and winter weather safety on Saturday.

When faced with a storm, weather.gov wants you to prepare by asking yourself and family, some of the following: "Do you have adequate supplies at home, at work and in your vehicle? Dress properly for the season. Do you know what to do if you become caught in a winter storm, whether you are outside or inside, in a vehicle or inside your home? Does your family have a disaster plan?"

Trump's accounting firm must hand over 8 years of tax returns, court rules

Decision handed down by U.S. appeals court Monday.

President Donald Trump's longtime accounting firm must hand over eight years of his tax returns to New York prosecutors, a U.S. appeals court ruled Monday, the latest setback for Trump in his tenacious efforts to keep his finances secret.

The ruling by a unanimous three-judge panel of the New York-based 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals backed the ability of prosecutors to enforce a subpoena for the returns against accounting firm Mazars LLP. Jay Sekulow, a lawyer for Trump, said the Republican president will appeal the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court, whose 5-4 conservative majority includes two justices appointed by Trump.

The office of Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance, a Democrat, is seeking the returns as part of a criminal investigation into Trump and his family real estate business. The scope of that probe is not publicly known.

The 2nd Circuit did not decide whether Trump is immune from being charged with a state crime while in office, as the president has argued. However, it found that even if he is, the immunity could not stop Vance from getting the returns from a third party, or from prosecuting him once he leaves office.

It would "exact a heavy toll on our criminal justice system to prohibit a state from even investigating potential crimes committed by him for potential later prosecution," 2nd Circuit Chief Judge Robert Katzmann wrote in the ruling.

Vance's office has agreed not to enforce the subpoena while Trump petitions the Supreme Court. Under the agreement, Trump has 10 calendar days to file the petition.

The timing of Monday's decision means the Supreme Court could probably take up and decide the case in its current term, which ends in June. It could, however, wait until its next term to hear the case, potentially pushing its decision until after Trump goes up for reelection next year.

The Supreme Court could also decline to hear the case altogether, which would effectively uphold the 2nd Circuit's decision and clear the way for Vance to get Trump's tax returns.

A spokesman for Vance declined to comment on the ruling.

Trump, who built a real estate empire with his New York-based business before becoming president, separately faces an impeachment inquiry in the Democratic-led U.S. House of Representatives.

Trump has refused to make his tax returns public, breaking with a decades-old tradition of U.S. presidential candidates releasing their returns during campaigns and presidents disclosing them while in office.

> "...repugnant to the nation's governmental structure and constitutional values."
> U.S. District Judge Victor Marrero, on immunity claim

In August, Vance subpoenaed Trump's personal and corporate tax returns from 2011 to 2018, and other records from Mazars USA, the president's longtime accounting firm. Trump sued Vance's office in Manhattan federal court to try to block the subpoena, arguing that as a sitting president, he cannot be subject to criminal investigation.

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Celebrate New York Election Day with Girl Scout cookies

Manhattan residents can get a taste of Girl Scout cookies a little early this season.

In honor of Election Day, local Girl Scouts are offering some of their famous cookies a month early.

New York City Girl Scout troops are hosting pop-up booths Tuesday at nine locations in Manhattan, with purchases supporting Girl Scout leadership programming across New York City.

If you purchase Girl Scout cookies from the one-day pop-up, you are helping support Girl Scout leadership. All proceeds from your cookie purchase will go back into the five boroughs to help fund the Girl Scout Leadership Experience. Additionally, $0.80 of each purchase will help support the troop.

And since it's Election Day, Girl Scouts of Greater New York is encouraging New Yorkers to vote before or after they pick up a box of Samoas, Thin Mints or other favorites.

If you don't pick up your cookies on Election Day, you'll have to wait until Dec. 15 to place your pre-order. If you are trying to stay away from cookies but still want to help with the cookie sale, boxes can be donated to service organizations through their Gift of Caring program.

The largest girl-led business in the country, the Girl Scout Cookie Program helps girls develop five essential skills that set them up to succeed: goal setting, decision making, money management, business ethics and people skills.

Here's when and where you can purchase the cookies, according to the Girl Scouts:

The major races
New York City Public Advocate: The city's Public Advocate serves as your representative in city government, and is also the first in line to succeed the mayor (much like the relationship between President and Vice President). Public Advocate Jumaane Williams (D – Incumbent), City Council Member Joseph Borelli (R) and Devin Balkind (L) are the three candidates in the running for this influential role in 2019.

District Attorneys:
Candidates will face-off to become the lead prosecutors for their counties; setting criminal justice policies and prosecuting criminal court cases.

The Office of City Council:
Your City Council member is responsible for overseeing the law-making branch of the city's government. They will negotiate and approve the mayor's budget, make and pass laws, decide on land use throughout NYC and ensure the best interests of city residents are met by city agencies. Three decades on, Germans remember surprise fall of Berlin Wall

Reminiscing begins as anniversary approaches.

Sascha Moellering witnessed the fall of the Berlin Wall at the Brandenburg Gate on Nov. 9, 1989. But it took about another 10 years for the border between the communist East and capitalist West to come down in his mind.

His mother was watching television at home and saw images of people shaking fences at the border after Guenter Schabowski, a senior East German communist official, accidentally announced the opening of the wall at a news conference.

"At some point my mother looked at me and asked: 'What are you doing here? Go! This is history! And you have to go,'" Moellering recalled ahead of the 30th anniversary of the event which ultimately led to German reunification.

"There were a few thousand people standing on the wall singing and dancing to Beatles songs, 'Give peace a chance,' of course, and the mood was really great," he said.

Pressure had been building on the East German government for months to let its citizens travel freely when Riccardo Ehrman, a journalist at ANSA news agency, asked a clearly underprepared Schabowski about current travel rules.

Stumbling over his words, Schabowski said the East German government had decided to let citizens leave through any of the border crossings - and he believed the new rule would take effect immediately. Dumbfounded and euphoric East Germans rushed to the border to get a glimpse of the West.

"I am not sure that I really contributed but maybe, if I did help it a very, very little bit, I am incredibly proud," Ehrman told Reuters.

It later turned out that the announcement was not supposed to be made until 4 a.m. the following day. Schabowski had also meant to say East Germans could apply for visas in an orderly manner.

> "I am not sure that I really contributed but maybe, if I did help it a very, very little bit, I am incredibly proud."
> Journalist Riccardo Ehrman

Hans Modrow, the last Communist premier of East Germany, was taken by surprise.

"I was walking when a young man came to me and said 'Have you heard? The border is open!' (And I asked) 'Where does that come from?' (And he said) 'Yes, the border is open, should I go?' And I said: 'Why would you go?,'" he told Reuters.

Susanne Roebisch, who was from East Berlin but was one of the few who managed to get permission to move to West Berlin with her family in 1985, remembers saying goodbye to everyone she knew as a 14-year-old, never expecting to see them again.

They got a shock when they heard the wall had been breached.

"We all sat there, thinking: 'What? The wall is open now? Was that a clear statement? Did he say everyone can go from East to West and West to East? What?'" REUTERS

Finding the humor in jokes again

Nicole Byer gives the scoop on her stand-up tour and comedic insights.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Actress, writer and comedian Nicole Byer has always been known for her witty and charmingly sarcastic banter. The 33-year-old has covered a lot of ground in the comedy world acting in movies, hosting Netflix's wildly popular amateur baking competition show "Nailed It," co-hosting a whopping four podcasts and now taking her comedy on the road with her stand-up tour. But what Byer may be most famous for is pushing boundaries (or perhaps capitalizing on the fact that she doesn't have any) and the comedic maven is most certainly an expert on that. Byer sat down with Metro to discuss her tour, her podcasts and chat about why audiences should put down their sensitivity walls to allow jokes to simply be jokes again.

You wear many hats in the comedy world, hosting "Nailed It" on Netflix, four different podcasts and also now you're on tour with your stand-up. What do you like the most about performing live in front of audiences?

Everything I do is so different, but I like doing it all. I like performing in front of audiences though because it's almost like instant gratification. You say something and the audience will tell you if they like it, whether it's funny or not. It's way different then say with a podcast where you record it and then you just don't know. Or when you film something you also don't know until it's edited together and goes out to the world, then there's a response. Stand-up is very instant. But that's also the beast with stand-up. You can do the same joke for two years, have it kill and then go to another town where they don't like it, but then you go to another town and they love it.

You're very candid in your podcasts, even with your personal life. Can people expect that same kind of openness with your stand-up?

I do talk about my personal life with my stand-up, but I don't know. I don't really think of it that way because I don't really have boundaries where other people have boundaries. I don't think I'm being super open, I think I'm just talking about my life. It's a mixture of stuff about me, instances that I've had and then also observational stuff. It's not like my comedy has a message, I think it's just funny.

Switching gears a bit, can you us more about the two podcasts you've launched this year: "90 Day Bae" and "Best Friends?"

So "Best Friends" is just me and Sasheer Zamata, who is my best friend, talking. The best way I can describe it — I read this review, it was honestly a very bad review, this lady hated our podcast. She said, "It just sounds like two people who love each other with inside jokes." And, yeah that's pretty much what it is — we love each other and we love talking. If it's a live episode, at the end we do audience questions, or when we're recording it we have people send voicemails and emails with questions about friendship and we try to help them. Then, "90 Day Bae" is a re-cap podcast that I do with my friend Marcy Jarreau about the best television show currently on TV — "90 Day Fiance" and all of its spin-offs. Honestly, the show is so funny and the editors deserve Emmys. Everything that happens is so wild, so Marcy and I watch it all and recap it.

You've said before that in today's climate no one can really take a joke anymore and that people are just angry. Is that ever in the back of your mind when writing jokes or recording your podcasts?

It's true that people love getting offended. It's so wild, I tell this joke about this man that I bumped into on an airplane and he turned around and asked if I was trying to pick-pocket him — that's racist. Like he's a white dude, he said that to me, it's racist and it's not okay. So onstage, I say if I could go back in time, here is what I would say — it's just snarky comedic things that I would say to him, but people started going "Aww." So, oh wait, we feel bad for this man? It's confusing because I think, why are you offended on behalf of this man who was rude to me? I think people are just looking to be offended. When I write jokes I don't really keep that in the back of my mind because I feel like I would just make myself crazy trying to please an audience. But I'll tell people, "That was funny."

I'll have other comics watch my stuff or give me notes and I'll sometimes not understand why audiences don't find certain things funny — I laugh, the other comedians laugh, it's funny. It can be annoying though that people can't sit and understand that they're jokes. I'm not going up and saying something horribly racist or misogynistic or phobic of anything. It's just an hour where you're supposed to laugh. People also forget that it's not literal, it's all just jokes and heightened. When you condemn a comic for an hour of comedy they did, that's insane because I'm sure you liked a little bit of it. Sometimes someone does an hour of comedy and you don't like five minutes — that's fine, you don't have to like those five minutes. But just say that and you can also justify that the rest of it was good. I don't know, I just think everyone has an opinion.

What does the future hold for you?

I want to keep doing everything I'm doing. Hopefully, I'll be on a show again, I like to do movies and I also wrote a book. But overall I just want to do more.

White Reaper are growing up and taking no prisoners

The band will shred the roof off of Bowery Ballroom tonight.

PAT KING

PROVIDED

White Reaper is one of those bands who can't necessarily be denied, no matter how seriously you choose to take them. Their blend of no bulls-t bubblegum power-pop and sleazy punk practically dares you not to enjoy yourself while listening to them. After signing to Elektra Records, the band that declared themselves to be the "The World's Best American Band" on their last release have released their follow-up, "You Deserve Love," which hits the same dopamine pleasure centers in your brain that can be occupied by the pop songcraft of ELO, as well as the youthful exuberance of punks bands like The Marked Men.

Since the band first started touring back in 2014, frontman and guitarist Tony Esposito, Ryan Hater (keys), Sam Wilkerson (bass), Nick Wilkerson (drums) and Hunter Thompson (guitar) have been refining and polishing their sound from their early visceral garage rock sound to a finely tuned rock band that hasn't lost touch with their roots but has global domination in their sights.

"I think whenever you are younger and playing in a band, aggression and energy is usually a pretty big part of it. Because it's usually what you are relying on to account for the fact that maybe your songwriting chops aren't totally there yet," says Thompson on the band's refinement over the years. "I think that we've evolved into [focusing] on the songwriting aspect of it. How parts work together. I think we all have a real fascination with that and love classic songwriters, love classic songs."

For "You Deserve Love," that attention to how each song was crafted was a huge priority when heading into the studio. Even though the band was able to write the entire "Best American Band" album in the studio, that experience tested their limits. And with this record being their first with such a big label, they wanted to make sure they were ready. The band fleshed out demos that Esposito had sent out for the majority of 2018, and by the time they went into the studio earlier this year, all of the extra work was worth it.

"We went into the studio in January of 2019 and we knocked it out in 14 days," Thompson remembers. "We did most of the tracking live and most of the songs were pretty true to how we rehearsed them. There were a few arrangement changes, sonic things we worked on in the studio. Everything was pretty true to the way we wrote them. The recording process was pretty painless."

One thing that the band has always held above anything else is to have fun and to hope that their enthusiasm emits through the music they create. As Thompson sees it, it's pretty unbelievable that their group of friends has made it this far by doing what they love. So, why take it more seriously than they need to? They could try to have a hardened exterior, but that wouldn't exactly be genuine.

"We definitely have a healthy dose of irony to all of us and are very lighthearted and don't take ourselves too seriously. That's for sure. A huge part of our relationship with one another is making each other laugh. So there's a lot of lightness to our music, our stage presence, our perspective on ourselves within the band and everything surrounding the band. It can be at odds with what managers and business people related to the music always want (laughs). Sometimes they just want pure earnestness. We're grateful for everything that we have and what we've had the opportunity to do, but whenever it comes down to it, we're just guys who ended up being in a band. There's a lot of comedy in that alone."

Make sure to catch White Reaper at Bowery Ballroom tonight. 6 Delancey Street.

APEROL HAS JOINED FORCES WITH CITY HARVEST NYC TO HELP NEW YORKERS IN NEED

We love a good cocktail here at Booze and Brews, but if there's a cocktail that can give back to the local community, we love that even more. Today's column is all about how a cocktail, an Instagram photo and a slice of pizza can help feed New Yorkers in need.

Aperol + pizza = a winning combo. CAMPARI GROUP

Aperol has joined forces with City Harvest NYC to raise money to combat hunger in New York City to celebrate National Pizza Month. Although National Pizza Month was October, they're keeping the festivities going until Nov. 15.

I spoke with Rebecca Fontes, Director of Business Partnerships at City Harvest, about the partnership and Fontes told me, "For over 35 years, City Harvest has been dedicated to feeding New Yorkers in need, and our work is only possible through the support of partners like Aperol."

Fontes added, "Nearly 1.2 million New Yorkers struggle to put food on their tables, and every $1 donated helps us feed a family for a day. We're thrilled to be a part of the #AperolLovesPizza campaign and are grateful to all who participate for supporting City Harvest."

Every time you go to a participating restaurant, if you post on Instagram in your feed or on your Instagram story using the hashtag #APEROLLOVESPIZZA and tag @AperolUSA + @CityHarvestNYC, Aperol will donate to City Harvest, which will feed one NYC family for a day. It's literally that easy, no strings attached.

I also spoke with Lana Kouznetsov, US Category Marketing Director, European Icons at Aperol, about the partnership and she said, "We are excited to partner with City Harvest as they share our passion of bringing people together for joyous charitable campaigns such as #APEROLLOVESPIZZA."

Additionally, Kouznetsov said, "Through this partnership, we are giving back to an amazing cause while also encouraging New Yorkers to enjoy the perfect combination of pizza and Aperol Spritz with friends this fall. We are proud to be in partnership with City Harvest and are excited to see all of the good we are able to bring forth – together!"

The locations participating in #APEROLLOVESPIZZA in New York City are as follows:

- Ribalta: 48 E 12th St, New York, NY 10003
- Marta: 29 E 29th St, New York, NY 10016
- Cecconi's DUMBO: 55 Water St, Brooklyn, NY 11201

ADAM GASE CAN'T FINISH 2019 SEASON AS JETS HEAD COACH

PANTORNO'S PERCH

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno

Adam Gase is 1-7 through his first eight games as New York Jets head coach. GETTY IMAGES

I've never coached a game of football in my life.

A majority of New York Jets fans have never coached a game of football in their lives.

Neither has a majority of NFL fans around the globe.

Yet most of us believe that we can call a better game for the Jets than their current head coach, Adam Gase.

Normally, I would come to the defense of the coach in question. It takes a brilliant football mind to succeed in the NFL, and even the most mediocre of coaches possess an impressive IQ for the game.

Not only do you have to study hours of film, break down a new opposer every week and formulate a game plan to succeed, but you also have to keep a crowded locker room full of egos happy.

It's a hard job.

But that doesn't mean that Gase gets a pass. The Jets have played half their schedule and it's already clear that the head coach shouldn't be on the sidelines next week, let alone the end of the season.

The Jets are now 1-7 following a loss to the Miami Dolphins on Sunday — a team that was 0-7 entering Week 9 and hadn't won a regular-season football game since December 2018.

Gase — who was billed as an offensive mastermind to help the development of second-year quarterback Sam Darnold — rolled another disastrously mundane game plan for a team that lacked any sort of conviction or heart.

Against one of the worst defenses in pro football, Darnold was held to just 260 yards passing and one touchdown while throwing an interception and getting sacked three times behind a Jets offensive line that blocks as well as a screen door trying to stop gale-force winds.

Paired with Gase's ridiculous playcalling, Darnold is actually regressing in his second season in the NFL as he's thrown nine interceptions in his last four games.

That alone should be a massive red flag for the Jets. The last thing they need is for Gase to ruin their franchise quarterback.

With the Jets once again going nowhere and the culture seemingly spoiled rotten, too (see, the Kelechi Osemele release and Jamal Adams trade rumor drama), it's impossible to say that the writing for disaster wasn't already on the wall when it came to Gase.

He continues to get chances coaching in the NFL because he rode the coattails of Peyton Manning from 2013-2014 during his time as offensive coordinator of the Denver Broncos.

When Gase joined the Chicago Bears as their coordinator in 2015, his offense was ranked 23rd in the NFL while the Broncos went on to win Super Bowl 50.

Somehow, he would spend just one season with the Bears, as it was deemed good enough to get him a head-coaching job in the NFL with the Dolphins, where he lasted just three seasons.

His team's offensive scoring ranks? Seventeenth in 2016, 28th in 2017 and 26th last year.

That's not worthy of an "offensive guru" title.

Let's look at the last 11 games that he's been an NFL head coach, shall we?

AS DOLPHINS HEAD COACH

Loss: 41-17 to Vikings
Loss: 17-7 to Jaguars
Loss: 42-17 to Bills

AS JETS HEAD COACH

Loss: 17-16 to Bills
Loss: 23-3 to Browns
Loss: 30-14 to Patriots
Loss: 31-6 to Eagles
Win: 24-22 over Cowboys
Loss: 33-0 to Patriots
Loss: 29-15 to Jaguars
Loss: 26-18 to Dolphins

That's a 1-10 record while his offenses have combined to score 10 touchdowns.

Yes, the talent on both of those teams were lacking. Yes, the schedule during this 11-game stretch hasn't been particularly kind to Gase, either.

But when you're continuously rolling out teams that lack any sort of gumption and can't put points on the board despite a "track record" of having an offensive mind, something is horrendously wrong.

Maybe Adam Gase needs to be a head coach for a complete NFL team that has a proven quarterback, playmakers galore and a competent offensive line.

But it's already painfully obvious that this isn't the right job for him.

Now management has to make that realization, too.

Beltran introduced as Mets manager

The former All-Star is back in Queens after officially being introduced as Mets manager Monday.

JOE PANTORNO

A new era with a familiar face officially began on Monday morning.

Carlos Beltran returned home as he was introduced as the 22nd manager in the history of the New York Mets.

The 42-year-old, who spent seven years with the organization as a star outfielder, was hired on Friday after a month-long search following the dismissal of Mickey Callaway.

"I'm very blessed to be standing up here in front of you guys as the new manager of the New York Mets," Beltran said. "I'm a little overwhelmed by this opportunity, but at the same time, I'm excited."

This will be Beltran's first managing gig at the MLB level after spending last season as an adviser with the crosstown-rival Yankees, as he beat out the likes of experienced names such as Joe Girardi — who was hired by the Phillies — and Buck Showalter along with newcomers like Eduardo Perez, Derek Shelton and Tim Bogar.

"It was Carlos' strengths that won the day," general manager Brodie Van Wagenen said when asked about his decision to pass on Girardi.

"I know it took a while, but we were detailed and wanted to make sure we got this right."

The second-year GM also highlighted a five-point system exuded by Beltran that won over Mets brass during the interview process:

1. POISE

"Carlos can command a room when he walks in. He has a presence, he has patience."

2. TRUSTWORTHINESS

"When we began this process, it was important ... to feel like we could exhale when we walked into the manager's office," Van Wagenen said. "We wanted to feel comfortable, we wanted to feel welcomed ... we can trust Carlos."

3. GROWTH MINDSET

"Carlos is a learner. He knows what he doesn't know and he's willing to acknowledge it."

4. COMMITMENT TO WINNING

"Carlos is committed to beating his opponent. Why do I say that? Everyone wants to win, there's no doubt about that," Van Wagenen said. "He takes it a step further. Carlos wants to beat his opponent. He looks for the little things. He looks for tips ... anything to exploit."

5. UNDERSTANDING OF PLAYERS

"Carlos' hiring is a signal and an affirmation that is clear and loud to this organization's core tenants of being a players-first organization. Carlos Beltran will be a player's manager."

Beltran will be taking over a Mets team that holds plenty of promise with a young core of hitters and a starting rotation that could be one of the best in the National League.

"We have a good ball club," Beltran said. "There's no doubt we have to work hard in spring training and focus on areas we didn't play well in last year ... I'm happy with the players we have and the pitchers we have so it's going to be a fun year."

He now has his chance to put this organization over the top for the first time since 1986, which he came so close to doing as a player in 2006 when his Mets fell in seven games to the Cardinals in the NLCS.

"Thank you for believing in me," Beltran said. "I can't wait to re-write our story being the manager of the New York Mets."
